About Me

I am a dedicated student of Media Studies and Journalism with a major in Public Relations and a minor in Sustainable Development. I have a strong interest in strategic communication, reputation management, and the role of media in shaping public perception. My academic training has equipped me with skills in media analysis, campaign planning, and audience engagement. I am particularly passionate about integrating communication strategies with sustainable development goals, aiming to create meaningful social impact through responsible and ethical public relations practices. I am eager to apply my knowledge in real-world settings, contribute to organizational growth, and develop innovative communication solutions in a dynamic professional environment.
