Subject: Proposal for permission to make a historical documentary video on the July Movement

Dear Sir,

At BuzzCraft Media, we believe in building meaningful narratives that bridge brands with the people they serve. As an emerging, dynamic PR agency, we pride ourselves on our fresh creative approach, data-driven insights, and unwavering commitment to delivering measurable impact.

I am Maliha Tasnim from BuzzCraft Media, working as a Client Executive & Communication Officer. We have followed the remarkable work done by July Massacre Archive to document and preserve the tragic and heroic moments of the July Movement. We strongly believe that these important stories must be shared widely to ensure that future generations understand the sacrifices and brutal realities that marked this movement.

In this regard, we would like to seek your permission to produce a documentary video that highlights the critical events, key moments, and untold stories surrounding the July Movement and your agency. We aim to promote this documentary through digital platforms and social media to reach a broader audience, both locally and globally.

We would greatly appreciate an opportunity to meet with you to discuss this proposal further and explore how we can best honour this significant history together.

Thank you very much for your time and kind consideration. We look forward to the possibility of working alongside your team to ensure these vital stories are never forgotten.

Sincerely,
Maliha Tasnim

Agency Introduction for BuzzCraft Media

BuzzCraft Media, founded on July 1, 2025, is a passionate and purpose-driven production business focused on conveying important stories. We make compelling promotional videos for political parties, social movements, and forward-thinking organisations dedicated to making the country a better, more progressive place.

At BuzzCraft Media, we think that visual storytelling is one of the most effective ways to inspire, enlighten, and mobilise people.

Our team consists of creative directors, scriptwriters, videographers, editors, and digital strategists that not only know how to build outstanding production, but also how to craft messages that actually connect with real people. Every project we embark on begins with research, true tales, and a genuine regard for our customers' objectives.

The objective is simple; we elevate the voices and ideas that create positive change. Elections or awareness campaigns, community-based work; we partner with our clients in a way that makes complex topics into impactful video that resonate emotively with the viewer. We consider care in the full cycle of creation, from ideation, to development, to final production, with creativity and our obligation to care.

BuzzCraft Media differentiates apart because we do more than simply make films; we also generate movements. We recognise that today's viewers value transparency and effect above false promises. Therefore, when we produce content, it is always grounded, built to create trust, and intended to provoke meaningful conversations.

As we expand, our vision remains focused: to be the world's leading provider of purposeful political and social media content, helping to create a world wherein ideas that build our communities are known in every pocket of the country. Your story is our mission at BuzzCraft Media.

Our Agency's core team members:

1. Al Eakram Mahmud Shoumik - Founder & PR Consultant
2. Prottay Hasan Drirho - Creative Head & Content Specialist
3. Shahadat Sayal - Media Manager & Research Analyst
4. Maliha Tasnim - Client Executive & Communication officer

BuzzCraft Media: Why US?

We recognize you have a variety of possibilities for producing your promotional content. What distinguishes BuzzCraft Media from the competition? The fact that we care just as much about your message as you do!

Our team doesn't just produce content. We partner with you to fulfil your purpose. We will take the time to learn who you are, what you believe in, how you are creating a positive change, and who you are trying to reach. Whether you are a political party working for a better world, or a community-oriented organization, we will find the story in your messaging and extract it from the background using creativity, honesty and impact!

What is distinctive about us is our human-first philosophy. We do not do cookie-cutter content. Every video produced for your organization is customized for you, your values and for the people you value - your audience. We take care of every detail and produce everything necessary - impactful scripts, striking visuals, distribution and every detail is purposefully done with intention and does not miss a beat!

Trust encapsulates BuzzCraft Media from the inside-out. You can trust we deliver results – on time, on budget and with total transparency. We don't consider you a client, we consider you a team member participating in important change.

So, when you choose BuzzCraft Media, you are choosing a media agency working for you and your mission – all frames, ingested words and ideas. Let's create a story that sparks change and makes a milestone!

Your story deserves to be told. We will help tell yours.

Organization Background

The July Massacre Archive, established on August 8, 2024, is an on-line repository designed to research, document and raise awareness about the July Uprising of Bangladesh. The Archive has amassed over thousands of followers on its face book page alone and has become an indispensable local resource for students, activists and citizens looking not only to understand that important moment in Bangladesh's history but to also memorialize it.

At its core, the July Massacre Archive, aims to record and document testimonies, photos, stories and other forms of documentation to record the sacrifices made by students and youth activists during the uprising. Many of those people will forever be remembered as martyrs in that they acted against perceived injustice and state oppression. The information is archived online and functions as a memorial to those who sacrificed their lives, and possibly as a living testament to archivists of the future.

The platform registers periodic updates which feature tributes to deceased individuals, historical analysis of the events of July, and challenging commentary on the social-political circumstances related to the protests through supporting critical perspectives. It uploads cultural projects such as revolutionary songs, wall writings, and public art projects to keep the memory and spirit of the uprising alive. These projects represent the idea that the struggle for justice and accountability is ongoing however it did not end with the events but instead continues through remembrance and civic engagement.

The page has a defined activist tone and expresses calls for justice for the deceased, calling the public to remember student and youth involvement in resisting the authoritarian practice of the past. At times, the page describes ongoing pursuits of accountability in reference to the victims' demands for proper investigations into what were alleged crimes against humanity during happenings of the protests. The page also works alongside cultural figures, writers, and organizations that engage in tactical constituency with hope of building impact.

Furthermore, the July Massacre Archive instructs followers to share on other platforms, particularly Instagram, for increased audience reach in order to engage younger generations. By integrating historical documentation with art and public participation, the July Massacre Archive attempts to maintain a sense of solidarity and responsibility to resist injustice.

Ultimately, the July Massacre Archive represents more than a Facebook page—it is an active archive, space for the articulation of truth, and a reminder that the struggle for justice depends on those who remember.

Organization Profile, achievements and success

The July Massacre Archive is an independent volunteer based online archive and activist platform designed to honour memories and tell the stories of students and young people who took part in the July Uprising in Bangladesh. It is a digital memorial, research tool, and advocacy platform that helps keep the memories of the truth alive in people's memories of what transpired in July.

Organizational profile

When the July Massacre Archive was founded, the group of young activists, citizen journalists, and activists from civil society saw need for an independent group to conduct honest and authentic documenting of the events and the experiences of the people who had their lives broken. The July Massacre Archive is digital reliant on its Facebook page, but it is on Instagram: @julyarchive24 and other social media platforms to reach youth where they are doing research and using social media platforms.

The organization functions with a grassroots-theoretically basis, it has no formal headquarters, and it encapsulates and embodies everything about student resistance and decentralized organizing. The primary mission the organization publishes, fact-checks and shares first-hand accounts, photographs, videos, interviews, and research that represent the human-length stories behind the headlines. Every post shared by the collective is done with awareness of the memory of the victims, in a thoughtful way that allows the opportunity to amplify the voices of survivors and their families, and to create a moment of critical reflection for followers.

The July Massacre Archive is dedicated to public work as much as documentation. The platform is very much an activist platform. In all cases, it holds power accountable, and it demands justice for the young protesters who were killed. It similarly calls for independent investigation into alleged crimes against humanity, not only on behalf of the victims but on behalf of the institutions it insists the media and public remember as true history.

Significant Accomplishments

An important achievement of the July Massacre Archive is that it has created an alternative narrative space. The July Massacre Archive has become a trusted source of counter-narratives steeped in citizen journalism and community testimony, in a context where state narratives are pervasive. It has provided a safe environment for witnesses and families to share their experiences and has preserved even little details we would never have known otherwise that could, perhaps, have been lost or silenced.

Another important accomplishment has been its contribution to mobilizing public memory through art and culture. The Archive's participation in the provincial and global initiatives such as the July Revolutionary Alliance (JRA), which undertakes variety of initiatives (e.g. nationwide wall writings, recitals of poetry, protest songs, etc.), confirms the agency of the JRA to sustain elements of the rebellion within an everyday experience. These kinds of activities are not merely symbolic; they allow for renewed conversations on campus, civil society, and among young people about dissent and collective action.

The Archive has also built a large and engaged online community. The Archive's Facebook page has garnered tens of thousands of followers, with posts again attracting significant amounts of engagement, shares, and discussion. This level of reach also extends the Archive's influence, as it is able to maintain public pressure on those in power, and create ongoing support for justice.

One of the Archive's accomplishments has been to commemorate individual victims. Through individual memorials, short documentaries, photo archives, etc., the Archive's work has brought to life the statistics. Followers are given names, faces, dreams, and unfinished stories. The emotional connection has increased when people can identify with human beings; this was a key step in the ongoing struggle for humanity, belonging, and solidarity rather than passive commemoration.

Measures of Success

The success of the July Massacre Archive cannot be gauged solely by numbers. A more accurate measure is how the Archive makes the past actionable in the present; how it leads from memory to action. Many students have referenced Archive posts as a launching point for meaningful dialogue around topics such as state accountability, human rights, and the obligation to act in service of truth. Another measure of success is in the Archive's ability to provide an antidote to misinformation. In an age when a plethora of fake news and misrepresentations of history exists, the Archive's attention to fact-checking and sourcing, with primary evidence to back its claims, adds credibility to the project and helps to safeguard the historical record, while providing an opportunity to interrogate government claims.

In addition, the Archive's cultural partnerships — through revolutionary music videos, murals, or spoken word performances, show the organization's innovative way of approaching memory—both as art and as activism, as artists weave history and culture to keep the uprising's memory true, relevant, and dynamic to the next generation.

Ultimately, the Archive is gaining recognition, both locally and internationally, among human rights activists, which is indicative of its reliability and usefulness. Now journalists, students, and researchers find the Archive's materials as primary sources in their journalism about the July Uprising, thus, the Archive has transitioned from being thought of as a social media page to an important place which archives grassroots history.

Services of The July Massacre Archive

The July Massacre Archive is not a regular organization with offices and workforce and commercial services. Instead, it is an organization that provides important social, cultural, and activist support to people in need in Bangladesh and abroad by documenting the history of the July Uprising and demanding justice for the dead. The Archive's support is based upon documentation, public-awareness, cultural resistance, and community support - all part of its mission to keep the truth alive.

1. Historical Documentation and Archiving

The Archive's fundamental service is the systematic documentation of events related to the July Uprising. This includes first-hand witness accounts, photographs, film, newspaper clippings, whether on social media or other platforms, and personal accounts of the victims and survivors of the Uprising. The Archive documents and verifies this material to serve as a living digital archive and to help mitigate the chances of historical erasure.

The documentation service the Archive provides is necessary in a context where state or mainstream accounts/ narratives will deliberately omit or misrepresent facts. The documentation service we offer with our Facebook posts and digital albums is intended to provide open access to facts for anyone interested, that may otherwise become obscured or forgotten. It allows families and communities to safely bring attention to their memories, evidence, and testimonies for collective truth-telling.

2. Memorial & Tribute

One other prevalent service offered by the July Massacre Archive is the establishment of digital memorials and personalized tributes. The Archive publishes individual stories of the student martyrs at the time, in many cases with photos, names, brief biographies and touching messages from friends and family of the deceased. This work serves to both memorialize the dead and additionally serve to humanize the victims of the July Massacre, reminding society that behind every number, a young life was extinguished, a life that framed hopes and dreams, a bright future, and promise.

Through these tributes, families and communities are provided the opportunity for recognition and solidarity, or model of the Archive as a space for shared grief, collection of thoughts, prayers, and messages of remembrance.

3. Awareness-Raising & Advocacy

As a public archive, the July Massacre Archive intervenes to raise awareness about the injustices that led to the protests. In many of their posts, through highlighting the wider socio-political situation in which the protests were situated, as well as the human right violations alleged to have occurred in relation to the state and the uprisings, the need for accountability, exposition of the socio-political conditions exhibited by the state, and importantly the context in which the state is involved in ongoing situations that continue to cause bodily harms. Through what are often research-eds, fact-checked posts, offers a format that allow citizens to assemble a framework for not accepting lies, and the propaganda put forth by the state.

This awareness service does much more than just online posts. The Archive's curators assist student groups, and grassroots activists in leveraging their visibility to put pressure on authorities for fair investigations and justice for the victims. The Archive's curators are human rights advocates and frequently organize calls to action, petitions, and public campaigns to try to keep the issue topical on the national agenda.

4. Engagement

The Archive also serves a significant engagement function in the community. By way of social media interaction and commentary, it has created a digital community of young people, students, researchers, and families, who come together to learn, share, and support, one-time, The Archive is inviting its followers to contribute stories, photos, and new knowledge; in this way the archive allows for intersecting participatory spaces.

What can be achieved by this promotional video?

A video piece for the July Massacre Archive can do a whole lot more than just tell people what the page is about – it can bring a whole mission to life. The most important thing it can achieve is awareness. Many people, especially young students today, probably do not know what the true stories are about the July Uprising or what those victims went through. A video with poise and raw emotion can bring a reality to those stories and make them relatable, feelings consumed, real faces, real families, and pain that endures to this day.

Storytelling like this creates empathy and understanding. Someone watching a video of a mother talk about her lost son or hearing a survivor's voice can be very different from reading a post. It draws people to believe that behind every article or news headline is someone who has been affected and, at this moment, calls for justice seem very real and urgent.

Another big thing the video can achieve is to strengthen the Archive's credibility. If someone sees a high-quality, fact-based video, they will trust that this organization is serious about the history and careful about the truth. This is significant, especially in the current context when lies are everywhere and misinformation is rampant. The video is a record of the Archive as a source of truth for students and educators, researchers, journalists, and anyone in-between that wants to with to understand better what happened.

A powerful video can elicit a call to action. It is one thing to read about injustices, but it is something much different to actually see the injustice in video; the video can elicit action that wasn't there before. It can compel people to share their own memories, provide photos or other evidence, volunteer, or support the work of the Archive in other ways.

It can also be useful in forming partnerships with other human rights group, artists or media outlets committed to sharing their own stories and histories.

Overall, the most important thing about the July Massacre Archive is that it ensures the memory endures. It challenges the powerful to erase or rewrite history. It provides families and communities a place to remember and mourn collectively. It teaches new generations about how to challenge injustice. It transforms pain into action — in the form of song, wall writings, protests and art — and demonstrate that sacrifices were not in vain.

And ultimately, the video — and the Archive — serves as a conduit to link the past and the future; a reminder that to remember is also to resist.

Pre-podaction, Production, Post-Production:

Interview with Mr. Abu Bakar, founding member of the July Massacre Archive. Throughout the interview he was expressing his journey in July movement and how they started the July massacre archive and what has motivated them.

We were approaching a master's level student at university of liberal arts Bangladesh when he expressed his thoughts on the July Massacre Archive page and why it is important.

Following the flag scene, we began planning our next interview in Dhaka University area.

Our interview with a bookseller at Bangla Academy, when the bookseller was telling us how important July Massacre Archive is for the future generation.

During the interview with A.F.M Moniruzzaman Shipu who is an Assistant Professor of Media Studies and Journalism in ULAB and also a July movement fighter, when he expressed how important to keep evidence in any context in history whether it is positive or negative.

In the process of editing, we were juggling for what to cut and what to keep as almost all the interview was very long. So, it was very tough to select the best part from the initial interview.
